

The University of Georgia is a land-grant, sea-grant university whose mission is to enrich and transform the lives of Georgians through teaching, research and service. All University of Georgia institutes, schools and colleges, including the extension network throughout the state, work with the Office of Public Service and Outreach to share the University's vast resources of knowledge and talents throughout Georgia and the world.

Those units included in the management network of the Office of Public Service and Outreach include:

- Business Outreach Services/ Small Business Development Center
- Carl Vinson Institute of Government
- Georgia Center of Continuing Education
- Georgia Museum of Natural History
- Information Technology Outreach Services
- J.W. Fanning Institute for Leadership
- Marine Extension Service
- Office of International Development
- State Botanical Garden of Georgia
- University of Georgia at Gwinnett

Call us to find out more!
706/542-3352
jdeprima@arches.uga.edu
<http://service.uga.edu>

University of Georgia
Public Service and Outreach
300 Old College
Athens, Georgia 30602

PUBLIC SERVICE AND OUTREACH AT THE UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA

Using UGA's intellectual capital to build a better Georgia

The University of Georgia Connects With the People of Georgia Every Day.

“A three-year-old boy near Fitzgerald, Georgia is alive and well thanks to the quick thinking of a county extension agent, the expertise of two UGA botanists from the Museum of Natural History, the Internet, and a digital imaging device made possible by the UGA Digital Imaging Project that enabled the botanists to identify a toxic plant eaten by the little boy.”

— Associated Press

“UGA’s Newly Elected Officials Institute gives newly elected officials an understanding of the laws dealing with local government, so they can pursue their goals.”

— Jerry Griffin
executive director of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia

SERVING GEORGIA

Public service and outreach is both a University of Georgia tradition and a commitment for the future.

“The Georgia 2000 Information System is phenomenal. Thank you for putting so much information into such a useful and usable format.”
— Colin Wright
senior software engineer, Excelerate

“Right now, the Georgia SBDC is working with me in my home town of Plains, Georgia to improve our downtown business environment. This kind of assistance is of particular benefit to individuals and communities with limited access to professional services.”
— Jimmy Carter
former U.S. President

“If every business gets the kind of help we got from the Georgia SBDC Network, they can be successful, too.”
— Ella Silverman
owner, Big City Bread